

Open Source Catches Fire

🔥 GCU GRADUALLY THEN SUDDENLY

2026-04-20 · 00:26:34

“Forty-four percent of songs uploaded daily are AI-generated, but only three percent of streams—the flood nobody's listening to.”

— LENAR KESS, TODAY'S NARRATION

Kimi K2.6 just matched GPT-5.4 on SWE-Bench Pro. Open-source models are no longer playing catch-up—they're setting the pace. Meanwhile, Atlassian joins the enterprise data grab, 44% of Deezer's daily uploads are AI-generated, and engineers are warning that agent architectures are repeating MS-DOS security mistakes.

- The open-source inflection point — Kimi K2.6 beats closed models
- Agent reality check — Why parallel agents fail
- Enterprise data sovereignty — Atlassian's training grab
- Creative platforms transform — 44% AI music on Deezer
- Security déjà vu — Agent architectures repeat DOS mistakes
- What actually works — Grok's productivity pivot

CHAPTERS

00:00:04 The Open-Source Inflection Point

00:04:28 The Agent Reality Check

00:08:28 Your Data, Their Model

00:12:51 Forty-Four Percent

00:17:34 Everything Old Is New Again

00:22:01 What Actually Ships

CANONICAL

<https://braid.opentangle.com/episodes/2026-04-20.html>