

A Piece of the Problem

2026-06-06 / 00:20:29

“The government wants a stake in these companies the same week the most boring money in the world won't touch them.”

— Jonas Vale, today's narration

Watch on YouTube

Trump floats giving Americans an ownership stake in AI companies — the same week the S&P 500 refuses to fast-track those exact firms into the index. We follow the money: who owns the upside of the AI buildout, and who absorbs the cost.

- The Trump administration weighs an equity stake in OpenAI
- S&P 500 won't waive its rules for unprofitable AI firms like SpaceX, OpenAI, and Anthropic
- How the public reacted to Trump's ownership-stake comment
- New York passes a one-year moratorium on hyperscale data centers
- A facility-level study of 403 US hyperscale data centers and their grid draw
- The FDA fast-tracks AI chatbots that diagnose and prescribe, despite a 34% accuracy study
- A top White House AI advisor leaves to build a pro-Trump policy institution
- A fake presidential speech goes viral across Africa and the Caribbean

- 00:00:04 The Public Becomes a Partner

- 00:03:58 The Most Boring Money in the World Says No

- 00:06:53 Own a Piece of What, Exactly

- 00:09:14 New York Draws a Line in the Grid

- 00:13:07 A Fast Track for the Chatbot That Guesses

- 00:15:22 The Advisor Walks Out to Write the Rules

- 00:16:51 The Speech That Wasn't

- 00:19:19 Who Holds the Receipt